When I contemplate Hollins — a “quad” immediately pops into mind. Structured, yes — but with innumerable possibilities for extension and growth — with a radiating warmth that excites those who contribute to this liberal arts community.

I believe in this place because I like what happens to the folks I know here. They are authentic and accountable. I think this comes from having been pushed while being supported into self definition. It's not easy, but it's life giving.

Hollins, as a woman's institution, is a shelter without walls. It offers us the challenge to become more than ourselves and supports us unfailingly when we are seriously committed to the opportunities for fulfillment that it presents to us. As friends, we discover the value of trust and tolerance. As students of a liberal arts curriculum, we gain a perspective of ourselves and our world. Here, we can experiment, we can question, and we can criticize, with a growing self-confidence in our ability to achieve. With this new faith we have acquired as women, we will be able to turn inward and strengthen our minds, turn outward and strengthen society.

Hollins College is not a "girl's school" . . . it is a college of and for women . . . a community wherein women will be supported in the development of their personal potential . . . an academic community of both freedom and discipline . . . a community wherein both intellectual and personal growth are encouraged.

Over the past four years, the meaning of Hollins has grown from simply being a "college" to being one of the most important parts of my life. The factors which have nurtured this growth have been centered around the size of the college, which has made it possible for more personal relationships to develop. The atmosphere of a women's college has also been a factor which has cultivated a desire to grow, to pursue personal interests, and to contribute individually in those areas. Through working with Honor Court, it has been my privilege to deal personally with faculty and students. It has been through this aspect that I have seen the deep personal concern of the faculty and students, as well as their willingness to help, that has truly made Hollins have a very unique and special meaning for me.

Hollins is people —
people who are engaged in realizing themselves
... through awareness of living and learning.
My hope for Hollins is that she begin to understand her collective direction and get at the job of that realization.

Community House is an academic intentional community that grew from students' request to the administration for alternative living arrangements. Students receive academic credit to participate. Nine students and a faculty family directly apply concepts of community to their personal lives through shared experiences of responding to individual needs; raising money to support the house with plant and bake sales; preparing three communal meals a week; participating in a weekly seminar for house business, personal issues and discussion of readings on community; and grouping with the school psychologist. Deep respect for others has evolved from sharing life styles with others from ages one to thirty-three over a continuous period of time. Community House is a Hollins mosaic — all of us unique individuals yet one as a group through hard work, sharing and caring.

There are two great things that have happened at Hollins over the years. One is Transactional Analysis and the other is peppermint stick ice cream with hot fudge sauce. The practical application is that you can gorge yourself on the ice cream and still be O.K..
